Multicultural Issues in Counseling: New Approach to Diversity By Courtland C. Lee

This widely adopted, seminal text builds on the strengths of previous editions and offers sound direction from leading experts for multicultural practice with diverse client groups in a variety of settings. Fully updated and inclusive of feedback from educators and practitioners, this edition goes to the core of what constitutes culturally competent counseling and interventions with the following groups:

African Americans

Latinos/as

Asian and Pacific Islanders

American Indians

Arab Americans

Multiracial individuals and families

Women and men

LGBTQ clients

People with disabilities

Deaf populations

Older people

Economically disadvantaged clients

Military personnel

Case studies and innovative counseling techniques throughout the text emphasize the development of a productive working alliance between counselors and their clients, personal awareness and skill building, and practical application. Chapters on framing ethical issues in a multicultural context and increasing global literacy conclude the book.

Editorial Review

Review

This book is a godsend. It can be used by professors of counseling, psychology, social work, and psychiatry to help students understand and more effectively intervene on behalf of culturally diverse clients. It will also benefit practitioners. Clemmont E. Vontress, PhD Professor Emeritus of Counseling George Washington University

The fourth edition of this book articulates contemporary challenges in multicultural counseling. Specifically, the inclusion of issues related to working with military families, clients with disabilities, and socioeconomically disadvantaged individuals is timely and beneficial to counselors. Of particular interest is the discussion on international competencies to achieve global literacy. This text should be required for all entry-level counseling students.
