Editorial Review

About the Author

An Outline History of ENGLISH LITERATURE This monumental work from the celebrated author William Henry Hudson is not only a chronological account of various books written in English Literature but is also about the various authors who wrote them. It takes us back immediately behind those whose genius and thoughts their books embodied. The book focuses an attention upon the personalities of the men by whom the English Literature has been made. The limitation of the space has confined the discussions almost to commonly known as general literature encompassing pre Chaucerian Period to the Present Age. William Henry Hudson, British author, naturalist and ornithologist is best known for Green Mansions (1904), an exotic South American romance with Rima, the mysterious creature of the forest, halfbird, halfhuman.
