Editorial Review

From Booklist

This volume collects the rest of Pérez's brief early-1980s run of drawing Justice League of America—a dream assignment for the young artist—and catches him on the verge of departing to devote his full energies to The New Teen Titans. It's easy to see why Pérez's work on the two comics established him as a popular talent in the medium. His meticulously detailed style proved an asset for discriminating the multiple members of the two superhero teams in stories that sometimes featured more than a dozen leading characters. The final story here, Pérez's swan song on JLA, is particularly noteworthy, featuring chapters drawn by guest artists who originated the characters, including Carmine Infantino for Flash, Gil Kane for Green Lantern, and Joe Kubert for Hawkman. --Gordon Flagg
