Editorial Review

Review

. . .Effective as well as entertaining (Masters Seminary Journal 20040603)

. . . a light and entertaining preview of what preaching might look like in the early twenty-first century. (Timothy S. Warren Bibliotheca Sacra 20040603)

About the Author

Kent Anderson once spent a week on an Oregon beach catching footballs with NFL quarterback Jeff Kemp, but generally his athletic activity includes playing ice hockey with his church league and following the sporting events of his three children. A Canadian resident of British Columbia, Kent dreams of taking his 17-year bride, Karen, to Europe someday to bask in the atmosphere of English history.

Michael Duduit (PhD) is the founding publisher and editor of Preaching magazine. He is also the founding Dean of the David T. Clump Graduate School of Christian Ministry and Professor of Christian Ministry at Anderson University in Anderson, SC. Michael is author and editor of several books. He is founder and director of the National Conference on Preaching and the International Congress on Preaching. He has been a pastor and associate pastor, has served a number of churches as interim pastor, and speaks regularly for churches, colleges and conferences. He has taught and served on the administrative staff of several institutions, including Samford University, Southern Baptist Seminary, Palm Beach Atlantic University, and Union University. He and his wife, Laura, have two sons, James and Stephen.
